Target Market Determination
Everyday Transaction Accounts

A Target Market Determination (TMD) is a document which describes who a product is intended to be appropriate for based on a consumer's needs, financial situation and objectives (target market). A TMD is not a product disclosure statement and is not a full summary of the product features or the terms of the product.

It helps us make sure we're keeping customers at the center of our approach to the design and distribution of our financial products. The design and distribution obligations are intended to help consumers obtain appropriate financial products by requiring issuers and distributors to have a consumer-centric approach to the design and distribution of products. A TMD describes any conditions around how the product can be distributed to customers. It also describes the events or circumstances where we may need to review the TMD.

Review triggers

The review triggers that would reasonably suggest that the TMD is no longer appropriate include:

- a significant dealing of the product to consumers outside the target market occurs
- a significant number of complaints are received from customers in relation to their purchase or use of the product that reasonably suggests that the TMD is no longer appropriate
- a material change to the product or the terms and conditions of the product occurs which would cause the TMD to no longer be appropriate
- a notification from ASIC requiring immediate cessation of product distribution or particular conduct in relation to the product
- evidence that a material number of customers are using the product for purposes inconsistent with the target market

Review periods

Initial Review: The initial review date is 12 months after issue

Ongoing Review: No later than 12 months from the date of publication for this TMD

Ad hoc Review: A review will also occur when a review trigger is activated.
