Rooms for everyone—without the stress

Planning a wedding for 250+ guests, including a large Irish family flying in, was already a feat—but finding enough nearby hotel rooms? Nearly impossible. See how Mairead and Pat avoided a hotel block meltdown with Engine.

The Problem

Mairead and Pat were planning a large out-of-town wedding at a venue that was already at capacity—and hosting multiple weddings that same weekend.

They needed extra rooms for their guests fast, without getting pulled into messy negotiations or wasting hours they didn't have.

The Solution

Mairead and Pat submitted one quick request on Engine's site, instantly taking a major task off their plates. No juggling hotel spreadsheets. No endless calls. Just a quick, easy text thread with their dedicated Engine coordinator, Peter—who handled it all behind the scenes.

By outsourcing the logistics to Engine, they not only saved time and money—they protected their peace of mind during one of the busiest moments of their lives.

The Results

-  Saved hours of time that would have been spent contacting hotels individually
-  Avoided complicated negotiations with hotels during an already hectic planning process
-  Kept communication easy with simple text updates
-  Focused on celebrating, knowing their guests were taken care of

It was really great, really easy... honestly, I didn't feel like I had to do anything.

Stress-free rooms

When Mairead and Pat realized their wedding venue was fully booked—and hosting several other weddings that same weekend—they knew they had a problem. How would they find enough rooms for their guests without adding even more chaos to their already packed planning schedule?

Request and let Engine do the rest

One quick request on the Engine platform was all it took. From there, the Engine team took over. No complicated spreadsheets or stressful negotiations.

Just a simple text thread with Peter from Engine and an easy-to-use platform that allows you to view all hotel proposals in one spot. “[Peter] even texted me, which was better than email,” she said. “My inbox was already out of control with vendors.”

One less thing to worry about

Her advice for other couples? Don't wait. “If something's stressing you out, just get it done early. It's one less thing to worry about, and Engine is the easiest yes. They handle everything for you.”

The perfect day, without the stress

With Old Hollywood glam vibes and scenic Pennsylvania mountains, their big day was set up to be spectacular. Engine simply helped take care of the basics, ensuring all guests had somewhere to stay. With all of their guests conveniently booked, Mairead and Pat could avoid any last-minute stress and focus on celebrating their wedding with the people they love.
