

PREPARE FOR HEALTHCARE COSTS

POTENTIAL BENEFITS OF A HEALTH SAVINGS ACCOUNT (HSA)

Healthcare expenses may be a significant part of your retirement budget. Having an HSA is a powerful way to set aside money for those healthcare expenses — now and in the future.

TRIPLE TAX ADVANTAGE

There is no federal income tax on HSA contributions, potential investment growth, or withdrawals when the money is used to pay for qualifying medical expenses.

ALWAYS YOURS TO KEEP

HSAs don't have a use-it-or-lose-it requirement each year and can be accessed even if you change employers.

SAVE, INVEST, SPEND

If you don't need access to your HSA savings to cover current health-related expenses, you can invest those funds for potential tax-deferred growth.* At age 65, you can withdraw money (without penalty) and use it for anything, including non-healthcare expenses.

CONVENIENCE

You can access all of your Transamerica accounts, including your HSA, with one sign-on, one password, and one service number.

In addition, your HSA debit card can be used for payment with no requirement to immediately verify the expense (we highly recommend keeping receipts for tax purposes).

ELIGIBILITY CONSIDERATIONS

You cannot contribute to an HSA once enrolled in Medicare. It's recommended you stop making HSA contributions six months prior to your 65th birthday to avoid potential penalties. Note: Enrolling in Social Security automatically triggers Medicare Part A enrollment.

If in a HDHP, you can only contribute to an HSA or Medical FSA, but not both. However, some employers may offer a limited purpose FSA which can be paired with an HSA. A limited purpose FSA can be used to pay for eligible vision and dental expenses.

*You must have a minimum balance of $2,000 in order to start investing your savings.

If you choose to use HSA funds for ineligible expenses at age 65 or older, you'll still owe applicable income taxes on what you take out.

HSA vs. FSA – which account is right for you

An HSA and Medical FSA (flexible spending account) are two common ways to save and pay for healthcare expenses. They have some similarities but there are also key distinctions:
