Grows naturally as an epiphyte in the company of other plants on the wet forest floors of Colombia and sits as a subshrub among that tropical plant community.

LIGHT

Avoid direct sunlight, at least 9 hours of bright indirect

WATER

Evenly moist, but not soggy

FERTILIZER

Feed once a month at half-strength when the plant is actively growing in spring and summer. When daylight is shorter, fertilizer and water are reduced.

GROWTH

Slow-growing, depending on the health and age of the plant. Once mature, leaves can grow over 2' long and carry a variable number of leaves at this size.
