Theresa Reed (aka The Tarot Lady)

A FOREWORD FROM OUR CHIEF FUTURIST

United Therapeutics has embraced uncertainty from our inception. We began as a parents' quest to save their daughter's life with a newly-created chemical. There was huge uncertainty that this chemical would work for our daughter's disease, or that it would even be safe. But we embraced that uncertainty as strongly as any parent embraces their children. As a result, that chemical is now approved by the FDA under the name Remodulin for continuous use, under the name Tyvaso for inhaled use, and under the name Orenitram for oral use.

In the case of United Therapeutics it seems that the bolder we are, the more fortunate we are. For example, we are now known as the company that broke the barrier in achieving xenotransplantation without signs of acute rejection. We dared to modify ten porcine genes in our endeavor to create an unlimited source of organs for the countless thousands of people who die due to the organ shortage. The first gene we modified resulted in FDA approval of the first genetically modified animal as a food source for people with meat allergies caused by a bite from the Lone Star tick. The tenth gene we modified resulted in keeping a man alive for two months, and in establishing a pathway to clinical trials for many more patients.

Of course, it takes confidence when one is going into the unknown. It took confidence when the Wright Brothers risked their necks flying high above Huffman Prairie in Ohio. Or when Thomas Starzl pioneered successful liver transplantation after dozens of previous failures. Today, at United Therapeutics we are evidencing our confidence in the testing of Tyvaso for idiopathic pulmonary fibrosis and for progressive pulmonary fibrosis, and in our efforts to build an unlimited number of transplantable lungs in our laboratories. It takes tremendous confidence to have created our Computational Laboratory for In Silico Molecular Biology (CLIMB) for building digital models of human biochemistry, so that our future medicines can be created vastly more quickly and safely than in traditional clinical trials.

To be human is to embrace uncertainty, for that is reality, while making our own luck with bold confidence and pragmatic technology. That is why at United Therapeutics we say biology is technology, and that our purpose is Medicines for Life. Fortune favors the bold.

Onward!

Theresa Reed (aka The Tarot Lady)

Keywords:

Passionate, clever, multi-talented, freakishly punctual

Background:

Theresa Reed (aka “The Tarot Lady”) is a Tarot expert, astrologer, teacher, and author who has been reading Tarot for over thirty years. She is the author of Twist Your Fate: Manifest Success with Astrology and Tarot and about a dozen other books. (Psst...there are more books to come because she’s a Gemini and has a lot to say.)

Theresa loves to teach because she believes everyone should know their astrological sign and have a Tarot deck in their hands (or chocolate) at all times. (Well, maybe not all the time. You gotta have a hand free for petting pushy felines who won’t take nope for an answer. Plus you don’t want to get chocolate all over your cards.)

When she’s not gazing at the stars or flipping Tarot cards, you can find her in the kitchen amongst her two-hundred plus cookbook collection (she cannot part with any of them, sorry Marie Kondo!), cooking up extravagant meals for her fussy Virgo husband. To learn more about Theresa and her work, visit her website: www.thetarotlady.com
