ACCOMMODATIONS

There are 77 guestrooms and suites along with a stand-alone four-bedroom chalet. The authentic Swiss chalet feel has been remodelled into a contemporary and airy style, with high ceilings and smart and sustainable architecture. Large bay windows maximize the connection to the natural surroundings to the back and left-to-right Alpine views. The bathroom is like a cabin in the woods, and as you walk in, you discover the stone-faced walls and subtle decorative glass panels that play on the light shining through. Bespoke furniture completes the experience, with the solid woods and natural fabrics used throughout.

Consistent with Six Senses sustainability standards, the locally inspired design is visible in the use of quartzite stone facades, local larch and oak species, and slate roofs. Wherever possible, recycled and renewable materials have been used including flooring, millwork, and fabrics. Each space is not only stylish but also functional and responsible. Energy and water conservation play a vital role in the overall design.

The Terrace Rooms and Suites enjoy a slope-side position with generously sized balconies facing the final turn of the piste: the only sounds are the chuckle of a stream and occasional swoosh of a ski. The ground-breaking Sleep With Six Senses standard features handmade mattresses, cotton bedding that breathes and all the fundamentals for a good night's sleep.
