Dr. James Dobson: Hello, everyone. You're listening to Family Talk, a radio broadcasting ministry of the James Dobson Family Institute. I'm Dr. James Dobson, and thank you for joining us for this program.

Roger Marsh: Welcome back to Family Talk, the broadcast division of the Dr. James Dobson Family Institute. I'm Roger Marsh, and on today's classic program, we're going to hear part two of a powerful conversation Dr. Dobson had with Kim Meeder. Kim will be sharing a story of a courageous woman who attended one of her events called Ignition. It's a conference that's held at the Crystal Peaks Youth Ranch. In fact, this year's event is going on right now as we speak.

It all started back in 1995 when Kim and her husband, Troy, founded the Crystal Peaks Youth Ranch. It's located on over 100 acres of farmland just outside of Bend, Oregon. The ranch was developed to spread the love and redeeming power of the gospel of Jesus Christ by pairing rescued horses with kids who'd suffered emotional, spiritual, and sometimes even sexual abuse. On today's program, Kim and Dr. Dobson will be talking about the ins and outs of what goes on between those horses and these kids. So let's join our own Dr. James Dobson right now and his special guest, Kim Meeder, for the conclusion of this uplifting discussion right here on Family Talk.

Dr. James Dobson: Well, Kim, it was such a joy to have you here yesterday. You had me in tears, and it's not the first time you've done that. You're really good at that because-

Kim Meeder: Oh, dear.

Dr. James Dobson: I tell you what, the Lord has a way of breaking into our conversations, and He has done that from the beginning more than 20 years ago when I first interviewed you.

Kim Meeder: Yes, sir.

Dr. James Dobson: I want to give a kind of an overview of what we said yesterday about Crystal Peaks Youth Ranch in Oregon for the benefit of those who didn't hear yesterday's program, and there'll be many of them because every day there's a turnover. Take just a minute or two, talk about the ranch and what its purpose is, what its mission is, and how you link wounded horses and broken individuals.

Kim Meeder: Absolutely. Crystal Peaks Youth Ranch was founded 25 years ago, and we exist to pair rescued horses with herding kids free of charge. We've done this for 25 years, and that is not a testimony of how great an organization is. It's a testimony of how great our God is.

Dr. James Dobson: Right. Yeah. His blessing has been on it.

Kim Meeder: His blessing has been on it, and the foundation of what we do is to rescue, mentor, hope, and empower. What that means to us is that our ranch was founded on rescuing horses in need, and then we mentor the children that come to the ranch. We have programs that bring hope to the family, and we've helped to empower into existence over 200 other similar ministries in the United States and Canada, and many in foreign countries.

Dr. James Dobson: Let's pick up on that. How have you been instrumental in starting in 200 other places, the kind of ranch and the kind of ministry that the Lord has given you? Tell me the story. There's got to be a backstory to that.

Kim Meeder: Well, the backstory to that is you, my dear friend, from our interview in 2004. We were inundated with tens of thousands of communications, hundreds of which were people who said, "You are living my dream. I never knew it was possible, you could connect horses and children, and serve Jesus Christ for both. Will you show us how to do the same thing?" And so the following year, starting in 2005, we started teaching what we call Ignition, and it is a conference that teaches people how to use horses in ministry, how to ...

And use is the wrong word, how to align horses to walk with the truth and power, and redeeming love of God's Word. Through that conference, which happens every year, there are now over 200 other ranches, and there are probably twice that many that are in process of becoming a ranch. Even this year, we have had such a huge request for more ranches that we're going to have to hold potentially several Ignition conferences.

Dr. James Dobson: And there'll be more coming after today.

Kim Meeder: Yes, yes. Go, Holy Spirit, go.

Dr. James Dobson: Tell me about the mental capacity of horses to recognize that an individual is hurting. How does that take place? Do you actually see it happen when a horse connects with a child or an individual?

Kim Meeder: Absolutely. Absolutely.

Dr. James Dobson: What's that look like?

Kim Meeder: It's unique in each situation. Horses, as you mentioned yesterday, are designed by God in such a beautiful individual and unique way, and the science behind it, a portion is that horses have more mirror neurons than any other created animal on the planet, and that is a neuron in the brain that will reflect back what it is experiencing, and so when we pair rescued horses with hurting children, that horse will mirror back to that child what they're feeling.

Dr. James Dobson: You take that relationship between an animal and an individual, a child usually, and use that to teach a love for Jesus. That's an amazing connection too.

Kim Meeder: That's the key connection. Apart from Jesus Christ, horses are just a band-aid, and that peace and safety that a child or an adult feels in the presence of a horse blows away by the time they reach their car, but when we connect what Jesus' created horses for to the Creator, the one who made that peace, and who made that hope, and who made that joy, we want to introduce you to the Author of redemption and love, and that's what transforms us all, and if we don't give those who come up our driveway, the redeeming love of Jesus Christ, then we have failed.

Dr. James Dobson: Yeah. That is your not so well-concealed secret, that when you bring people there to deal with their brokenness, in relationship with a horse, you're ready to give them an understanding of the Giver of life.

Kim Meeder: Straight up.

Dr. James Dobson: That's what you're there to do. That's your primary objective, isn't it?

Kim Meeder: Yes, sir. Anything less than giving people the redeeming gospel of Jesus Christ's love is a counterfeit.

Dr. James Dobson: Do people know that when they come to you?

Kim Meeder: Absolutely, and the ranch is available for everyone. It doesn't matter who you are, what you believe, what culture you're from, what religion you were raised in. Just come.

Dr. James Dobson: The title of your book, Revival Rising, is not only an individual response, a revival in an individual, in a person, but does it relate to cultural revival, the spreading of the good news across the land?

Kim Meeder: Absolutely. It's compelling to me that this book was written a year and a half ago, and it came out in the middle of a global pandemic. The whole foundation of this book is that revival is not something that happens near you, revival is something that happens in you, and it is the ignition of the Holy Spirit within God's people of knowing who we are and what our calling is, and it is one-on-one. It is each individual sharing what Jesus Christ has done for them, and that goes on to the next person and the next person, and then it becomes cultural, but it always begins the same. It always begins fueled by love, one heart at a time.

Dr. James Dobson: Yeah. You talk in your book about someone named Kathy.

Kim Meeder: Yes.

Dr. James Dobson: I thought that was a wonderful story.

Kim Meeder: We were having one of our Ignition conferences, and this woman lives in Canada, a great distance away, and she was so excited to come, and as the enemy would have it right before leaving, she came down with a virus that left her with severe vertigo, so severe that she couldn't stand, and she felt like she was going to have to pass, and yet, in all her prayer time, she felt the Lord saying, "There's nothing I can't do in you or for you or through you. Do you trust Me? Have faith." And so it was made known to her through doctors flying was completely out of the question. She wouldn't survive it.

So one of her dear friends offered to drive her 1,200 miles one way to the ranch. In that trip, she became more and more ill. They had to stop every 30 minutes so she could throw up. It was grueling, and so they finally reached the ranch 15 minutes before Ignition was getting ready to start. She was so ill, that she had to have a walker to move.

What I loved most about her is even in this state of illness, she never lost her joy, and she was as bright as the day is long. Day by day, I kept thinking, "Lord, I really want to pray with her. I know you can heal this," and I kept sensing from Him, "Wait, wait. I want her to believe that too." That faith rose up in Kathy on the very last day of the conference, where she pulled me aside and said, "I think I'm ready. I would like to pray."

And so we drove her in a ranger as high as we could get up on the ranch property up underneath the cross. We have a cross made out of juniper wood, and we started to pray, and we started to identify all the fear factors in her life, and she started calling them out by name and bringing them to the feet of Jesus and making fear be accountable to Jesus. Her arms are in the air. We're worshipping and we're singing, and she's stamping, and she's dancing, and that's when the Lord said, "Look at her," and she's not leaning against anything. She's standing with her eyes closed, and her head back, and her arms raised.

"I have healed her, not only her heart, but I've healed her body too." That's when I tapped her on the arm, and I said, "Kathy. Kathy." Her arms were raised, and this woman, she opens her eyes, and I can just see half of her nose and her eyes, looking at me over her arm, and she looks at me like, "What?," and I said-

Dr. James Dobson: "What's going on here?"

Kim Meeder: "Honey, look at what you're doing right now. You're standing unassisted with your arms in the air, and your head back, and your eyes closed. Jesus has healed you from the inside out. It is finished." She's literally got her arms in the air over her head, and she looks down at her feet, and she just starts to scream, and she's like, "He did it, He did it. Jesus did it."

This incredible release of faith, there's nothing our God cannot do, and in a moment, a simple, beautiful-hearted woman by faith stepped forward and said, "I believe He can do that," right up until the moment that He did. As the conference was closing down, I offered to give Kathy a ride of the ranger, and she held her arms up and said, "Nope, I got this, me and Jesus." She walked down a very, very steep path. As I drove the ranger down, her walker was in the back, we put it over by the trash, and her friend popped up and looked at me across the crowd like, "Where's my friend?," and I just pointed in silence up the road as Kathy was walking down the mountainside, and she screamed and started to run toward her friend, who she had given six days of her life to drive 1,200 miles, and now, Jesus Christ has met her friend in this place and healed her completely, and they met in an embrace and went down to their knees, weeping in gratitude before the One who can heal anyone who believes that He can't.

Dr. James Dobson: But it's not primarily about physical healing, it's primarily about healing of the soul.

Kim Meeder: Yes, sir.

Dr. James Dobson: Well, Shirley and I have been there, and we've seen the people that are touched. You allow parents to bring kids there when they've been abused. You told a story last time about a little boy whose all his teeth had been kicked in by his father. That's not an unusual situation. You bring whatever children, parents want to come, and there's no charge.

Kim Meeder: Correct.

Dr. James Dobson: And introduce them to a horse, and the healing begins.

Kim Meeder: Yes, sir.

Dr. James Dobson: You've got a million stories, don't you?

Kim Meeder: I do. How much time do you have?

Dr. James Dobson: Well, one of them was named Christian, or at least that's the pseudonym you've given to that individual to protect the identity.

Kim Meeder: Yes.

Dr. James Dobson: Tell us about that individual.

Kim Meeder: My dear friend and beloved assistant, and I were invited to go to Romania to share the gospel in some of the poorest villages in Eastern Europe through Romania and Moldova. During that time, we were invited to a horse ranch that does therapeutic riding, which is very different than what we do. We do equine ministry, and they were doing equine therapy, which is working with horses outside of faith in Jesus Christ, and they wanted me to come and demonstrate to them why what we do works, but it doesn't work without faith in Jesus Christ. They were frustrated that what I kept sharing with them is, "Ask the only One who knows the way. He is the Holy Spirit and the One who leads into all truth, and He will tell you what needs to happen."

And so kind of hands on the hips, prove it, and so we went into a large arena, and they brought out a horse, and they led in a young man who was 12. He was born blind, and he was high on the autism spectrum, and they wanted me to prove what I was saying with this little boy. And so I took him by the hands, and we started talking. He knew some English, so we developed a friendship with this horse, and then it came time for him to ride, and so they just put a pad on the horse, and to satisfy their education, I had him ride the horse forwards and backwards and sideways while touching the horse's head and tail, and giving him a good gift of love, which was rubbing the horse everywhere he could reach while the horse was walking. So that creates balance, which is what they were steeped in, but now, you need to see what Jesus Christ can do.

And so I said, "Christian, have you ever trotted?," and he said, "No." I said, "Does that sound like fun or does that sound scary?," and he said, "I think it sounds like fun." So I gave him some instructions, and we started off at a trot, and he screamed. This horse jumped into a lively trot, and he rocked backward and let out this half man, half boy scream. I looked at him, and he was laughing.

What was coming through his blind expression was just pure joy pouring from Heaven, and I said, "Christian, oh my goodness. Oh my goodness, you're smiling. Your smile is so beautiful." As he's leaving me in the arena, trotting around, he would say, "Ms. Kim, can you see my smile? Can you see it from here?"

"And can you see it from here? Can you still see it?," and I said, "Yeah, I can still see it. It's so powerful, and it's so beautiful. Please don't ever stop." And so finally, he comes up to me, and I'm weeping and just saying, "You just gave me the best gift in the world. You have one of the most beautiful smiles I have ever experienced," and then he wanted to know what my smile looked like, and so I said, "Why don't you tell me?"

So I put his hand on my face, and he's feeling all over the contours of my face, and he whispers, "Your smile, it's like the best dream ever."

Dr. James Dobson: Really?

Kim Meeder: Then, he said is ... We talked about many things after that and about how his smile and genuine joy comes from Jesus Christ, and what a gift he's been given Jesus, and that he can give that gift back to Jesus by smiling to everyone he meets.

Dr. James Dobson: Your book ends, the last chapter with a story that's difficult to describe, but tell us about it.

Kim Meeder: When it comes to revival, I have often had people explain to me that the Great Commission is not for this time or for them, and my answer would be through this encounter. I love that Jesus taught through parables, taking something that we could see to illustrate something that we couldn't, and this is how I learn, and because this is how I learn, He teaches me about His word through everything that I experience. As we were talking before the show that my beloved husband is not only the CEO of a ministry that's going around the world, he has also earned his license as a merchant marine and his license as a fishing guide, and so we had served our family and friends for a season. There were two days left, we were fishing alone, and it was a big, bad weather day. The water was 49 degrees, the waves were high, the wind was high. You would be killed trying to go out.

And so we ended up fishing on the tide water, which is ocean water that has rushed up the river, and we fished until 4:15, and I heard the Holy Spirit begin to urge my heart, "It's time to go. It's time to go. Leave now and return to the marina at once, now." And so I shared with Troy what I was sensing. We reeled up our gear, put the mane down, and started streaming back toward the marina, and as we made the last turn into a very wide expanse of the river that's about a mile long, it acts like a wind tunnel, and I could see in the distance something that I didn't recognize, just shapes and colors, bobbing in the river where they shouldn't be.

Then, it moved, and it was a man in the water, and instantly, the picture snapped into focus, that it was a capsized boat, and this was debris in the water, and there was a man in the water that was 49 degrees, and I started ... I could hear myself saying, "I've got you, I've got you. You're going to be okay." I got the salmon net, and I'm reaching for him, and he's almost unconscious. Through the wreckage, I could see that there were reams and reams of yellow nylon rope floating in the water, and they were around his legs.

This rope was connected to the boat, and the boat just went underwater, and the Holy Spirit was yelling, "Get the ropes off him now." I pulled him to the boat, and I just kept hearing myself say, "I've got you. You're going to be okay. You're going to be okay." His head rocked back, and that's when I could hear him whisper, "But he's not."

"What? What?" And as I reached down to grab him by his life jacket, that's when I realized there was a second man in the water who had already perished, because we didn't get to him in time.

Dr. James Dobson: You did save the first man.

Kim Meeder: The first man survived. The point of sharing this encounter is that he told me, while he and his friend were in the water, not one, not two, but three boats passed them and did nothing. They didn't stop, and because they didn't stop, he watched his best friend die. When it comes to the Great Commission, there are men, and women, and children in the water all around us every day that are dying without hope. If Jesus Christ is your Lord and Savior, we can choose to become that life ring that draws these hurting in our midst into the redeeming love of God the Father, Jesus' Son, by the power of the Holy Spirit, or we can drive by them and say, "Wow, I hope the next boatload of Christians loves you more than I do, because right now I love me more than you."

In such a time as this, in the middle of a global pandemic, people are afraid, and for you and I to reach out for them with the hope that we have, that is the heart and soul, and the bedrock of the Great Commission. It is your Commission, and it is my Commission.

Dr. James Dobson: You just heard it. The title of the book is Revival Rising: Embracing His Transforming Fire by Kim Meeder. This book is available in all the places where you can find books today. Would you give our regards to Troy? He did a program here with us some years ago.

Kim Meeder: Yes, sir.

Dr. James Dobson: Shirley and I love you all and appreciate what you're doing, especially your love for Jesus, which comes through in everything that you're doing.

Kim Meeder: Well, I've had a good mentor over the years, and he's sitting across the table from me, and I would wish to say thank you, my dear, dear friend, for staying the course and for standing unshakably on the power of the Word of God, and speaking the truth, and because you did that, a generation was transformed by the love of God, who is coming back.

Dr. James Dobson: Well, we serve the same Lord. Thank you for your love for the Lord.

Roger Marsh: Well, I hope you found some spiritual encouragement from today's conversation here on Family Talk. You've been listening to the conclusion of a two-part discussion featuring our own Dr. James Dobson and his special guest, Kim Meeder. Now, if you missed either part of this inspirational presentation, remember, you can always listen again when you go to drjamesdobson.org/familytalk. You can also listen to any of these episodes on the official Family Talk JDFI App right on your smartphone. It's available in your App Store.

Now, as we hear on the news and on social media, we are definitely living in very turbulent times these days. You don't have to look too far to see that our nation is experiencing a civil war. Ideas we once commonly shared are now being ridiculed in the public square, and the spirit of our nation is being strained. By the way, this is no coincidence, as Dr. Dobson reveals in his special two-disc CD collection called "America's Spiritual Civil War." The first disc features Dr. Dobson, talking with popular conservative author and speaker, David Horowitz, and they discuss the origins of hostility toward the Judeo-Christian values we hold dear.

On the second disc, Doctor talks with popular radio host, Dennis Prager, about his documentary called No Safe Spaces, which details how free speech is under attack on campuses nationwide. Now, you can get a copy of this special two-disc CD collection when you go to drjamesdobson.org. Click on the Resources tab, and then select Store. We'll be happy to send you a copy of "America's Spiritual Civil War" as our way of thanking you for your gift of any amount in support of the JDFI today. That's right, you select the amount that you would like to donate, and then we will thank you for that gift by sending you this valuable resource right to your door.

I'm Roger Marsh, and on behalf of the Dr. James Dobson Family Institute, thank you for making us a part of your day. May God continue to richly bless you and your family as you grow deeper in relationship with Him.

Announcer: This has been a presentation of the Dr. James Dobson Family Institute.

Dr. James Dobson: Hello, everyone. Do you need help dealing with the everyday tasks of raising a family? I'm James Dobson here, and if you do, I hope you'll tune in to our next edition of Family Talk. Our main purpose in this ministry is to put tools into your hands that will strengthen your marriage and help you raise your kids. Hope to see you right here next time for another edition of Family Talk.
