

BINGO!

Acts of Kindness Edition

Small acts can have a big impact. Give someone a reason to smile.

Use the birthday calendar to send a coworker a “Happy Birthday” email with a note about why you like working with them.	Say something nice about a coworker to an administrator.	Tape a few dollars to the staff vending machine.	Display a thoughtful quote in a public space (classroom, faculty lounge, bathroom). Find a few here. tinyurl.com/FSS-Quotes	If you’re stopping for coffee before school, grab one for your work bestie.
Spread a little sparkle by visiting classrooms or offices with electronics wipes and offer to clean people’s monitors.	If you’re running to the cafeteria, ask coworkers who are staying in their classrooms to work if they want french fries. Or just bring them french fries.	Ask someone you don’t know too well about what they’ve been doing in class, or what interesting projects they have coming up.	Make muffins or cookies and pass them out to the office and maintenance staff. They often get overlooked.	Follow up with a coworker who has shared a story about someone in their family. Ask how things are going.
Think of someone who has been getting on your nerves. Consider that they’re doing the best they can. Pop in to say hi and give them a small (genuine) compliment.	Share a tech tip that you’ve loved with your department, friends, or anyone you think may benefit from it – even if it’s small. tinyurl.com/FSS-tech		Straighten the desks in a few classrooms when the teacher is out of the room.	Walk through the cafeteria or other public areas and clean up any trash or push in chairs.
Pick an educator and work with your class to brighten their day. Send a few students to their room or office to deliver the message/offering.	Check in on a new staff member and ask if they have any questions about events that are coming up, duties they’re assigned, or anything else.	If it’s the best pen you’ve ever used, you probably have more than one. Leave your extra on someone’s desk with a nice note and sign it from the “Office Supply Fairy.”	If there’s a teacher whose teaching style is vastly different than yours, ask to observe them. Talk about why they teach the way they do. Learn from them.	Offer help to your coworkers during your down time – rearrange a space, get rid of unnecessary items, or wipe down shelves.
Learn how to conquer a dreaded task, like saving images from from old emails, and share the info with as many people as you can! tinyurl.com/FSS-Chore	Sit with someone new at lunch or during your planning period. Ask them a little about themselves, then actively listen.	Start a playlist on YouTube to collect videos that made you laugh or feel touched. Send one out to a friend if they need a pick-me-up. tinyurl.com/FSS-Funny	Hang a sign in the faculty lounge announcing Pet Day. Create space on a bulletin board for everyone to post pictures of their pets.	If you overhear students saying something nice about a staff member, let them know.
