TRACE THE DEVELOPMENT OF AMERICAN LITERATURE ACROSS THE DECADES

American Fiction, 1774-1920 contains prose fiction that reveals much about America through centuries of radical change, enabling students and researchers to answer key questions. The ability to cross search American Fiction, 1774-1920 with Gale's other digital primary source collections places titles in context with historical newspapers, monographs, ephemera, and other sources. Content is based on several authoritative bibliographies:

- Titles to 1900 include nearly all the works found in Lyle H. Wright's American Fiction: A Contribution Toward a Bibliography. The Wright bibliography offers first and hard-to-find editions of major writers including Louisa May Alcott, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Stephen Crane, Mark Twain, Henry James, and other well-known authors. These works help build a comprehensive picture of the period.
- Titles from 1901 to 1910, gathered from major American fiction collections, follow the general selection criteria established by Wright as sourced from the Library of Congress Shelf List of American Adult Fiction.
- Titles from the period 1911-1920 are based on Geoffrey D. Smith's American Fiction, 1901-1925: A Bibliography and compiled from the holdings of the William Charvat Collection of American Fiction at the Ohio State University Library. This bibliography highlights local-color fiction, popular genre writing, and treatment of disreputable subjects in fiction.
