THE FINAL TARGET

Nora Roberts

NEW YORK TIMES BESTSELLING AUTHOR

LIBRARY READS PICK

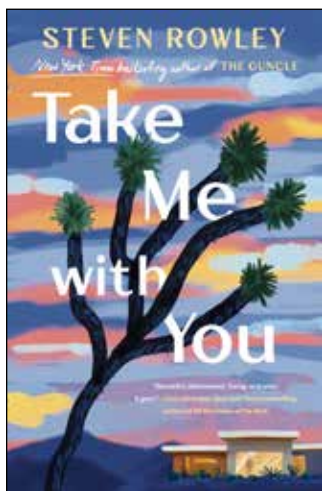

EDITOR'S CHOICE 1

"This romantic suspense is perfect for Roberts's many fans, as well as avid readers of Lisa Gardner and Freida McFadden." — Library Journal

Dustin was just an aspiring writer who wanted advice, Arden Bowie reassured herself. But after giving in to one of his incessant invitations and chatting with him over coffee, she discovered that ignoring her inner alarm bell had been a terrible mistake. Her relief at his imprisonment is tempered by anxiety when Dustin's wealthy mother helps to get him a paltry five-year sentence at a psychiatric facility. Arden decides to write a new story for herself, but while she learns to thrive, Dustin remains his delusional, twisted self. He still believes Arden's purpose on earth is to serve and please him. And his job is to protect her. But who will protect her from him?

A NOVEL

Madeline Cash

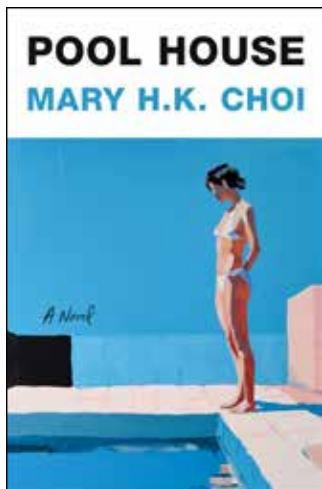

INDIE NEXT PICK

"A keen, whimsical novel that . . . signals the arrival of a notable talent." — Library Journal

Catherine and Bud Flynn's open marriage has reached its breaking point as their daughters spiral in their own chaotic orbits: Abigail is dating a man in his twenties nicknamed War Crime Wes; Louise maintains a secret correspondence with an online terrorist; and Harper is being sent to wilderness reform camp due to her insistence that someone is monitoring the town's citizens. Casting a shadow across their lives is Paul Alabaster, a billionaire shipping magnate. Rumors of corruption circulate, but no one dares dig too deep. No one except Harper, whose obsession sends the family hurtling into a criminal conspiracy — one that may just bring them closer together.

POOL HOUSE

A NOVEL

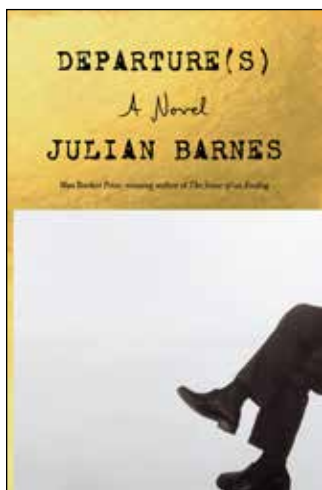

Mary H.K. Choi

NEW YORK TIMES BESTSELLING AUTHOR

Stevie cannot escape her mother. Many dream of moving to L.A. and into the spotlight, but Stevie can't wait to move away from it. Reeling in the aftermath of her lover and TV husband's death, Moon struggles to process her grief. And the last thing she expects is for Stevie to leave her too. Now, neither Stevie nor Moon can afford to quit each other. And their cost of living forces them into a pool house in the backyard, while their home is rented out to pay the bills. But when Adam, Moon's former TV son and Stevie's forever crush, arrives, the three are pulled into a messy orbit, play-acting a picture-perfect family even as tensions rise and relationships unravel.

DEPARTURE(S) ★★

A NOVEL

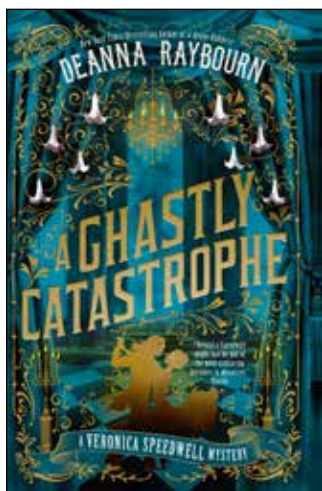

Julian Barnes

"Barnes explores memory, identity, and aging in this elegiacal and witty metafictional novella . . . [and] remains in top form." — starred, Library Journal

Whether Departure(s) is mostly fiction or not, there is a lot of its author in it. It is a love story, that of two friends Julian Barnes met at university in the 1960s. Julian played matchmaker to Stephen and Jean; he was deeply invested in their love and insulted when they broke up. Forty years later, he tries again, watching as their rekindled affair produces joys, betrayals, and disappointments. Barnes examines not just the quixotic relationship but his writer's eye upon it. Having promised he'd never write about them, he breaks the promise to fulfill one to his readers in this delightful and poignant novelist's game that only Julian Barnes knows how to play.

A GHASTLY CATASTROPHE ★★★

A Veronica Speedwell Mystery

Deanna Raybourn

NEW YORK TIMES BESTSELLING AUTHOR

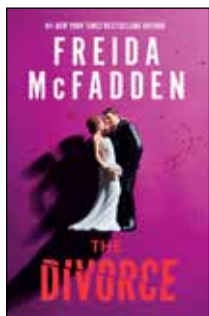

LIBRARY READS PICK

"Raybourn's series continues to delight with its mix of historical elements, twisty mystery, and delicious byplay between the two main characters." — starred, Library Journal

When the corpse of an entitled young man is found entirely drained of blood in a carriage next to Highgate Cemetery, Veronica's interest is piqued. And then a second victim is found, his death made to look like a suicide — and Veronica and her beau Stoker know the hunt is on. The two men share one link: they were both members of a society so secretive that only a singular mention of it can be found anywhere. Just as Veronica and Stoker get closer to unraveling this macabre mystery, another body turns up, and they quickly discover they've gone from being the hunters to the hunted.

 EDITOR'S CHOICE 3

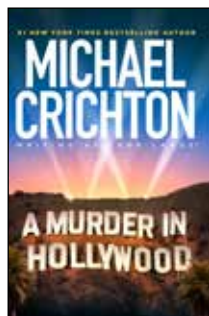

Naomi was living the quintessential love story. Boy meets girl. They fall in love, get married, buy a house, start a family. Then — he kicks her out, drains their accounts, and takes up with a 20-something. It's a brutal end to the story. Naomi should accept defeat: move into a dingy apartment, get back into the workforce, and piece together the shattered remains of her life. Instead, Naomi fixates on her husband's new girlfriend. What begins as cynical curiosity soon twists into obsession — and then into something darker. As Naomi uncovers secrets she never imagined, she realizes her own life may be in danger. But if it keeps her family intact, isn't it worth it?

THE UNICORN HUNTERS

A NOVEL

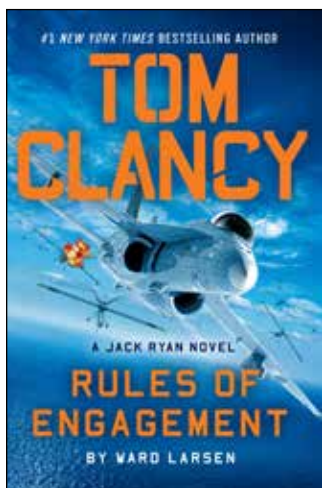

Katherine Arden

NEW YORK TIMES BESTSELLING AUTHOR

Anne of Brittany was a child when France invaded and drove her royal father to his death. Now she is a young woman, and France means to crown their conquest by marrying her to their king. Such an alliance would put her forever in the hands of her enemies, so Anne arranges a secret betrothal to Charles of France's greatest rival. The forest of Brocéliande was once the haunt of Merlin the Enchanter and the faerie queen. But magic is gone from Brocéliande, except for the occasional sight of a unicorn. While pretending compliance with France, Anne plans a unicorn hunt in Brocéliande. A bit of pointless pageantry. A diversion so she can wed in secret. Or so she thinks.

Meghan Quinn

 USA TODAY BESTSELLING AUTHOR

Renley Gossage has one shot to prove she's more than Cape Meril's favorite cautionary tale: restore her favorite candy shop before the town writes her off like they did her father. Theo Williams never planned on ending up in Cape Meril. A drunken game of truth or dare turned into a botched online engagement, and now he's across the ocean, escaping his father's control at a rental next door to Renley. Between collapsing drywall, gossiping neighbors, and the schemes of Renley's aunt, their forced proximity turns into something dangerously close to real. By the time the candy shop opens, they'll have to decide if this is the happy ever after neither of them saw coming.

ROAD TRIP

A NOVEL

Mary Kay Andrews

NEW YORK TIMES BESTSELLING AUTHOR
 EDITOR'S CHOICE 4

Maeve and Therese Dunigan are sisters — but the two have been estranged for years. When their mother's death brings the family back together, the two find that they have inherited a painting that could be worth millions. The only way they can prove it's real is to solve the mystery of how this portrait of an Anglo-Irish aristocrat made its way to their childhood home in Savannah, GA. This means a road trip to Ireland, to their family roots. With tensions simmering, the two hit the road and find themselves on twisty lanes, in colorful villages, at local pubs, and with handsome men. Can Maeve and Therese actually survive the journey without killing each other?

Three couples have disappeared from a resort in Florida, only to turn up dead soon after. It's up to the FBI Mobile Response Team to catch a serial killer, and they have the perfect bait — Detective Kara Quinn, who bears a resemblance to the targeted women. Undercover as newlyweds, Kara and FBI Agent Matt Costa set a flawless trap and arrest the predator. But on Monday morning, the MRT learns they never checked out of their hotel. As the team tries to find them, Matt and Kara learn the killer wasn't acting alone. Kidnapped and forced into a twisted escape room, they need to find a way out, because if they don't, they'll die.

A MEMOIR

Sara Nović

NEW YORK TIMES BESTSELLING AUTHOR

"Lucid and rigorously researched, Nović's memoir offers a powerful critique of the systems that have marginalized deaf Americans across the decades. It's a sobering must-read." — starred, Publishers Weekly

When Sara Nović failed her hearing test, her worldview was thrown into chaos. Eventually, she sought out other deaf people and was welcomed into a community rooted in American Sign Language. Now the mother of two sons — one biological and hearing, the other adopted and deaf — Nović reflects on her life both before and after parenthood. She's raising her children within the deaf world, offering them things her younger self needed. Nović's voice is one readers will hold on to, learn from, and be inspired by, as she asks us to recognize difference as a source of opportunity rather than fear and a chance to build something new.

THE MYSTERIOUS DEATH OF JUNETTA PLUM ★

A Harriet Stone Mystery • Book 1

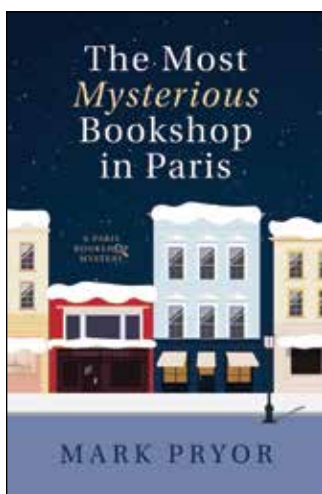

Valerie Wilson Wesley

"The characters and their setting come alive in this smart, appealing historical mystery."
— starred, Library Journal

1926. Harriet Stone, a liberated, educated Black woman, and Lovey, the orphaned, biracial 12-year-old she is bound to protect, are Harlem-bound, embarking on a new chapter. They have been invited to move from Connecticut by Harriet's cousin, Junetta Plum, who runs a boardinghouse. Alone but for each other, Harriet and Lovey have little left to lose — or so it seems as they arrive at Junetta's brownstone. After retiring to her room for the night, Harriet falls asleep. In the morning, she makes a shocking discovery. What ensues will lead Harriet in a startling new direction.

LOVE IS A FOUR-LEGGED WORD

Melinda Metz

Riley Bernard recently landed a job at a resort in Sedona, Arizona. Everything is going according to plan — until she sees a scrappy-looking dog limping along Highway 179. Riley coaxes him into her car and heads to work at the High Sky Resort. She figures she can stash him in one of the empty guest cabins. But when she sneaks the pooch inside, she's surprised to find it's occupied — by a very attractive man, Daniel Acker, who is instantly charmed by the scruffy canine. And by Riley, too. With Daniel's help, Riley tries to find the dog a good home. But the closer she gets, the more she can't bear to part with the furry guy. Or a certain human named Daniel.

THE BATTLE FOR TEXAS

Robert Vaughan

NEW YORK TIMES BESTSELLING AUTHOR

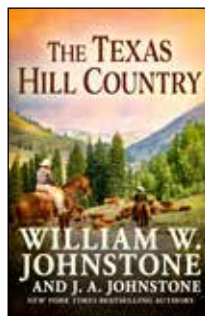

The Battle for Texas begins with the brave defense of the Alamo in which every man is killed. The women of the Alamo, Susanna Dickinson, and Caroline LaFont are spared. Luke Calhoun, who arrived too late to join the defenders of the Alamo, is held captive by the Mexicans until the end. It is then that he is freed by Santa Anna in order to lead the women to safety. Luke joins Sam Houston in the epic battle for Texas Independence on the plains of San Jacinto, a battle Caroline observes from a secure position. The ordeal she and Luke have faced has brought them together so that, as man and wife, they begin their future in a free Texas.

Most people don't even notice them — three tiny figures sitting at the end of a long pier in the corner of one of the most famous paintings in the world. Most people think it's just a depiction of the sea. But Louisa knows otherwise, and she is determined to find out the story of these three enigmatic figures. Twenty-five years earlier, a group of teenagers find refuge from their home lives by spending summer days on an abandoned pier, telling jokes, sharing secrets, and committing small acts of rebellion. Out of that summer emerges a transcendent work of art. The closer Louisa gets to the painting's birthplace, the more nervous she becomes about what she'll find.

Detective Sergeant Stilwell knows that his posting on Catalina Island is no paradise, but to most residents, it seems blissfully separated by twenty-two miles of ocean from the troubles of Los Angeles County. Acting on a tip from an informant, Stilwell and his deputies watch a plane land in the middle of the night a remote airstrip in the mountains. A duffel bag of drugs is dropped and the deputies move in, but things quickly go sideways. Shots are fired on the runway and the plane flies off. An inquiry follows, but Stilwell begins his own secret investigation into the drug deal gone wrong. After finding a lost backpack, he follows the mystery to the LAPD's Open-Unsolved Unit and Detective Renée Ballard. Stilwell and Ballard soon realize they are on the trail of a criminal who revels in taunting the authorities. Meanwhile, frustrated at being shut out of an investigation on his own island, Stilwell risks his already shaky standing in the department to pursue a case whose reach is wider than he ever imagined.

MY KILLER VACATION

A NOVEL

Tessa BaileyNEW YORK TIMES BESTSELLING AUTHOR

It was supposed to be a relaxing vacation in sweet, sunny Cape Cod — just Taylor Basse and her beloved brother — but discovering a corpse in their rental house has really thrown a wrench into their tanning schedule. Now a bounty hunter has arrived on the back of his motorcycle to catch the killer and refuses to believe Taylor can be helpful, despite the countless hours she's spent listening to true crime podcasts. Not to mention her fulfilling teaching career of wrangling second graders. Myles Sumner is only there to do a job, not babysit an amateur sleuth. Although it is becoming less of a hardship to have Taylor around. She's stubborn, distracting, and can't stay out of harm's way, but she's also brave and beautiful. Before Myles sinks any deeper into this attraction, he needs to solve the murder and get back on the road. Only now there are two threats — and the biggest one is to his heart.

Guinevere Sharpe has two childhoods. In one, she and her brother, Ennis, live in the wooded shadow of their family's isolated Vermont farmhouse; in the other, the pages of their mother's world-famous Ninth City books, where their magical adventures have made them household names. Guinevere's childhood isn't the enchanted idyll her mother's readers imagine: she and Ennis are growing up unwashed and underfed, escaping each day to the woods. As Edith Sharpe's books explode into epic popularity, the threats of a rural childhood give way to the escalating perils of fame, until the night it all goes up in flames, leaving Edith's series unfinished and her children the sole survivors. Now an adult coasting on her mother's name, Guinevere is mid-promotion for a ghostwritten memoir when her estranged brother, an artist, announces an upcoming installation titled, simply, Mother. Rumors swirl around a death connected to his last show. Unsettling recollections from Guinevere's childhood surface. She is forced to confront the questions she's spent the last twenty years running from.

Detroit, 1927. A city of smoke and ambition, where glittering wealth conceals a graveyard of secrets. Marjorie Lennox is the youngest daughter of a powerful automotive dynasty, a family known for money, not manners. Artistic, impulsive, and always slightly out of step, Marjorie has long been dismissed by her controlling father and self-absorbed siblings. But when she secretly applies to an exclusive arts program funded by an elusive benefactor, she sees a chance to redefine herself on her own terms. The building is grand. The participants are gifted. But something . . . is off.

Broke and directionless, our young man (the chosen moniker of Villa Coco's narrator) takes a job in the Italian countryside as the all-purpose assistant (technically, the employment ad asked for "adjutant") to Lisabetta, known to her friends as Coco, a strong-willed, wealthy widow of great local renown. Technically, our young man is an archivist, charged with cataloguing Coco's extensive and eclectic collection of art and artifacts, but what are his actual duties? He is charged with ridding the house of a marten, whatever that is, locating the antediluvian septic system, entertaining an endless carousel of guests (from bohemian painters to elderly princesses to handsome nephews), attending a funeral in order to make off with the urn, and not inadvertently sabotaging Coco's great and final plan—to locate the lost love of her life and be reunited before it's too late.

THE LAND AND ITS PEOPLE

ESSAYS

David Sedaris

PUBLISHERS WEEKLY BESTSELLER

He tries on the role of caretaker after his boyfriend Hugh's hip-replacement surgery, and both succeeds and fails. He buys his sister a cape and discusses his brother with a jaded Duolingo bot. He walks dozens of miles with his friend Dawn and challenges her to eat a truck tire. Ever adding to his list of "Countries I Have Been To," he rides a horse named Tequila in Guatemala, buys a bespoke priest's cassock in Vatican City, and goes on safari in Kenya without taking a single photo. There is sadness here but also delight: he revels in authors' biographies, the malapropism that becomes a decades-long inside joke, and pair of well-made cotton underpants. He is bitten by a dog. A train passenger vomits in his face. A woman on the street late at night either sexually harasses him or doesn't. Look how hard it is to be alive!

Dolly Brick has never met a problem she couldn't solve. Not when her mom left when she was twelve, and not at thirty-nine when she moves with her son back to Whitfield, Rhode Island, for the summer to keep her dad and brother from losing the family home. So when she comes across Stewart Whitfield — annoyingly handsome scion of the Whitfield family — with a flat tire and at the wrong end of a very public, very humiliating breakup, it's in her nature to help. But Stewart's proposed arrangement ends up being more than either of them bargained for, because as public dinners and high-society benefits turn into sunset boat rides and kisses that hit her bloodstream like a ghost pepper, Dolly starts to feel something more than helpful. She's never relied on anyone besides herself — can she really start now?
