The Crow and the Pitcher

Long ago, during a dry, hot summer, a thirsty crow was 11 looking for some water. As he flew over a bridge and looked 23 down, he saw a tall pitcher. The pitcher was sitting on a patch of 37 grass by the edge of a dry stream. The crow was thrilled, and he 51 flew down to fetch a drink. But when he wedged his beak inside
64 the thin neck of the pitcher, the water was too low to reach.
77 The crow stretched and nudged, but still he could not reach the 89 water. He kept trying and was about to give up when he came up 103 with a plan. The crow scratched the soil with his sharp claws and 116 dug up some pebbles. Then he dropped the pebbles, one by one,
128 into the pitcher. With each pebble, he saw the water rise a little 141 bit. The crow did not stop until the water was high enough to 154 take a drink.
